Abortion

I know there will be loud objections and condemnations of this essay. Let me begin by saying I am definitely opposed to abortion.

I am equally opposed to bringing unwanted children into this world to be abused, tortured, and raped and all of the horrible things that can happen to unplanned and unwanted children.

So I am left with a dilemma. Please do not counter with the solution that someone will adopt the unwanted child. Orphanages and Children's homes are full of children that have not been adopted.

Never forget that God aborts millions of fetuses every day. God does not want imperfect and unwanted children brought into the world, so he tries to get rid of imperfect fertilized eggs and fetuses before they become deformed and unwanted children at birth.

Man, in all of his sympathy, does everything in his power to take it out of God's hands by spending billions of dollars to take care of and perpetuate imperfection.

Let me propose a solution as awful as it may seem to some. If God has not already eliminated the unwanted or imperfect fetus before it becomes a child then let the mother make the decision whether to get rid of it or not. God gets rid of imperfect fetuses in his goal of perfecting his greatest invention -- the human race.

Let those who are opposed to abortion spend their money and time in educating people in pregnancy prevention. Primitive man did not try to overrule God and never went to the extreme of trying to preserve the unwanted or the imperfect.

Let us put some teeth in sexual responsibility. If a girl or a woman through irresponsible sexual activity does not want or can not care for the child, let the fetus be aborted. If she carries the fetus to maturity and cannot pay for its delivery she should be TEMPORARILY sterilized until she has paid the bill. Then she can be just as irresponsible as she wishes without punishing the public with the cost.

Let's get tough and realistic about sexual irresponsibility.

The male also has a sexual responsibility but I will not go into the gory details of how to solve this problem. DNA identification makes this fool proof safe for an innocent male.
